What would you do if a monsoon suddenly descended, and your door was knocked off its hinges? Would you be prepared for that worst-case scenario? In the face of a surprise monsoon, it's always good to have a plan. Monsoon Shootout is a great example of what can happen when Mother Nature decides to wreak havoc on the world with her unpredictable weather patterns. It's a no-holds-barred, brutal drama that follows the lives of two men, who are trapped in the monsoon. The film is an intense excursion into the lives of these two men and how they grapple to survive in this sudden downpour. Director Manish Gupta has made a film that shows how every momentous action has an equal and opposite reaction—the two men struggle to kill each other because they are trapped together, but if one succeeds in getting rid of the other, he will have to bear all the consequences by himself. It's a hard learnt lesson for both of them as they give it their best shot to get rid of each other. Monsoon Shootout is a film that will keep you at the edge of your seat till the very end. You'll watch it and feel like you were actually in the middle of a massive downpour—you'll feel every drop and every gust of wind! The film has been shot extensively in Bangalore, and it's evident from the start. It's a stark reminder that we live in a monsoon-prone region, and any surprise rain can throw us off-guard. The film begins with two men—Raju (Bharat Sharma) and Aakash (Rajesh Sharma)—who are on their way to meet someone. They are driving down a deserted stretch of the road, when the heavens open up and rush down with a vengeance. A strong monsoon storm is moving in fast. Raju and Aakash reach their destination and they run into another man, who is already there. They're not told who this mysterious man really is. It's only after he leaves that they realize that it was no ordinary man they met but a notorious criminal named Bhura (Nikhil Nayak). They spend some time there and decide to return home as soon as possible because of the bad weather. They reach home without any trouble, but soon realize that they are forced to live in an apartment that's quite isolated, but still very much in the city. They feel trapped. Raju is a decent guy who can be trusted, while Aakash is a bit of an erratic character. Both of them are well-educated and have respectable jobs. Aakash has come to Bangalore with his uncle (Sharat Saxena), the latter having taken the burden of bringing him here from Delhi after Raju recommended his brother Aakash as a good man for this job.
