Donald Trump Donald John Trump Biden leads Trump by 36 points nationally among Latinos: poll Trump dismisses climate change role in fires, says Newsom needs to manage forest better Jimmy Kimmel hits Trump for rallies while hosting Emmy Awards MORE on Thursday said North Korea has been making "big progress" and that a missile launch was "great" for his campaign. "I think they're doing a great job," Trump told reporters as he left the White House for a rally in Orlando, Fla. ADVERTISEMENT "It's great because that takes a lot of pressure off of me and off of my administration," Trump continued. "Hopefully they're going to continue the good work." The real estate mogul, who is hoping to secure the GOP nomination at the party's convention this summer, added that "it's been a great thing for me, it's been a great thing for the campaign and I'm looking forward to speaking about it tonight." The presumptive Republican nominee insisted that he's not being "too friendly" with the regime of North Korean leader Kim Jong Un, but said his administration will not give up trying to get the country to "denuclearize." "We'll find out very soon. But it's a very serious thing when you have missiles flying over a land that is rich in oil and gas," he added. North Korea conducted its third nuclear test in May, which its state media said was a successful test of a hydrogen bomb. The U.S. military is on high alert for possible missile launches or other provocations by Pyongyang, which has conducted two nuclear tests and 22 ballistic missile tests since the start of last year. Trump has regularly criticized the Obama administration's handling of the situation with North Korea.Q: How to animate border-radius of "inner" element
