[packethound] [translations] [color_effects] [branding_packages] [plans] From the website Want to know which version is currently used on your website or on the system you support? No need to guess – the default WordPress color scheme is displayed on the test page below. A: It's from version 4.6.3. You can check the commit history and find the date the file is edited to You can also find it in the database if you have the option, as it contains the version, which you can either find in the table wp_options From the response I got from a friend, it says that this theme is released around the year 2012. It is mostly likely that the WordPress Color Scheme is inherited from the original Theme which was released on WordPress around the year 2012. Stimulation of lipoprotein lipase by n-3 fatty acids in hamster adipocytes. We compared the effects of dietary intake of n-3 fatty acids on lipoprotein lipase (LPL) activity in vitro, by incubating freshly isolated hamster adipocytes in media containing either n-3 or n-6 fatty acids. Addition of n-3 fatty acids (eicosapentaenoic acid, 20:5(n-3)) to the culture medium had a potent dose-dependent stimulatory effect on LPL activity, which was not significantly affected by the addition of cholesterol to the medium. The concentration of 20:5(n-3) required to produce 50% of maximal effect was about 0.10 mM. The effect
