Edit UserProxy.ini and add "ProxyType=Generic". When you press "Apply" it will apply ProxyType as http and it will be visible under "Edit ProxySettings" under "Advanced". Details: It works for Windows 7 64-bit, Win8 64-bit, Win8 32-bit, Win7 64-bit, Win7 32-bit. It doesn't work for WinXP or WinVista, the reason for this is, Proxy Type is not supported by it. Hi! I hope you can help. I wanted to write a not-so-short review on Browser Proxy Setting 1.1 (by Majoras, released Feb-28-2015), the reason is that I have been asking you guys about the same question for about two months now and I still haven't been able to get a working solution. So I think it's about time to write about it. I'm going to start with the title, which I believe is the most important. First of all, it is not. It's only one of the three factors I want to mention that might be the reason for this problem. After reading your reply, I learned that you were going to tell me about using a URL-Redirector like Blue Coat for the HTTP-URL in the "Proxy Type" field. This is a good approach, but it won't work for me. The reason is that when I open the Settings for the first time, the browser tries to connect to the Internet directly and then it detects the connection, which is blocked by the company. Blue Coat is able to fix this problem, but it's not the solution I am looking for. My second main point is that I do not know the network infrastructure of the company I work for. They are using proxies for different purposes, but I can only know that. It could be a HTTP, HTTP-S or HTTPS-S proxy. It's very likely that it's an HTTP proxy. Here is what I wanted to do with Browser Proxy Setting, but it didn't work and I had to give up: I tried to enter the URL as in the "Proxy Type" field. 0.0.0.0 is the localhost, which should be recognized as the same thing as the IP-address of my local computer. This probably worked, but it did not work for me. I still tried with other IP- cc6f4944dd
