- Displays an easy-to-use and reliable LED matrix interface, making it easy to visualize and edit complex programs. - Provides two distinct ways to interface: either through a Serial Port via RS-232 or through a Parallel Port, via a USART. - Up to 4 Port Selectors. - Supports 8 test LEDs for each Port Selector - Supports 8 Push-buttons for 8 Port Selectors. - Supports 8 Shift-Registers for 8 Port Selectors. - Multiple Port Connections, each with its own LED and Push-Button interface. - Port Selectors can be set via COM Port(default is COM1) or by using a PC parallel port (default is Parallel Port or P2). - Multiple Programmable LEDs and Push-Buttons. - Programmable, multicolour LED output. - 4 Port Selector, 16 Push-Buttons, and 48 LEDs can be programmed simultaneously, making it easy to connect and test multiple devices. - Port Selectors and LEDs are suitable for use with Arduino development boards. - Can be used for debugging, testing, and programming, and makes it easy to connect devices to a PC (such as a parallel port, COM port, Arduino, or a multi-purpose computer). - Optional Software, for Windows only. - Compatible with both Linux (CentOS) and Windows (based on Linux: Knoppix and LinuxMint) operating systems Note: The version of this software released here is a stable version. While it is under development there might be some minor bugs or changes. To ensure it works with your device, please update it before reporting a bug or asking for help. More Information: ServTerm is a TCP/IP utility that acts as a server and lets you type responses. ServTerm is a winsock tool which can assist you in debugging client/server communications. You can make it act as a server (eg, a web server or mail server) to examine the data that clients transmit. ServTerm itself transmits data line-by-line to mimic server behaviour. You can also use ServTerm in client mode, in which case it acts like a telnet program except that you can scroll back to see previous output and transmit data line-by-line.
