Your connection to the ground is only as good as the rubber you choose. Picking the right bicycle tyres can completely change how your bike feels on a ride. If you go too narrow, you'll feel every bump; go too wide without the right pressure, and it feels like you are riding through wet cement. It's a bit of a science getting the balance right between speed and grip.

ROAD VS DIRT

For the roadies, bicycle tyres with a slick tread and high TPI provide that fast-rolling feel and plenty of grip in the corners. If you are heading off-road, you need knobby bicycle tyres that bite into the dirt and shed mud quickly. The Aussie sun can be brutal on rubber, so you need something that won't perish after a few months of summer riding.

- Puncture protection layers to stop those annoying thorns from ruining your day.
- Tubeless-ready options so you can run lower pressures for more grip.
- Different widths to suit your frame and the terrain you actually ride.
- Durable compounds that don't wear out after two weeks of commuting.

MAINTENANCE TIPS

Check your sidewalls regularly for any cuts or wear. Old, cracked bicycle tyres are a recipe for a blowout, and nobody wants to be stuck on the side of the road with a ruined rim. Well, keeping an eye on your pressure is the easiest way to make your rubber last longer. Look for signs of flattening in the middle of the tread, as that's a clear signal you're due for a fresh set. It's a small cost for a lot of safety and performance. Don't wait until you're sliding out on a greasy corner to realise your grip is gone.
